FUND MANAGER'S COMMENTARY

Financial markets continue to be challenging for the 1st quarter of 2022. Rising interest rates have triggered a correction in the stock market. The interest rate on the benchmark 10-year Treasury has gone up from 1.60% at the start of the year to as much as 2.50%. Rates have been rising rapidly in order to control inflation that has crossed beyond 7% in the US and is at multi decade highs. The pace and the magnitude of the interest rate increases have reduced liquidity in the financial markets decreasing the risk appetite of investors. As a result, equity markets dropped with expensive growth stocks and non-profitable tech stocks falling the most. Asian and Global stock markets are down between 5-10% since the start of the year.

On top of concerns from interest rate rises, we saw Russia invade Ukraine towards the end of February. There was some risk aversion during the initial part of the war, with stock markets falling. Inline with our expectations and consistent with the previous wars, the impact of the war has faded and equity markets are back close to pre-war levels. What is unique about this war compared to the previous wars is that US has imposed a great deal of financial sanctions on Russia. Among the measures that US has undertaken is to cut-off Russia from the SWIFT (Society for Worldwide Interbank Financial Telecommunication). This action will make it difficult for Russian banks and businesses to transfer monies internationally.

The sanctions have effectively stopped Russia from trading with the Western World and will also cut off supplies of Russian commodities to world. Although Russia is just 2% of world GDP, it is one of the top producers of commodities. Russia is a top exporter of Natural Gas and 2nd largest exporter of Oil. In the lesser-known commodities, it is also the largest exporter of wheat, palladium and nickel. These commodities are crucial in food, energy and manufacturing supply chains. The sudden reduction of supply of commodities has seen prices of all commodities surge. As the war is dragging on, we believe that the global economy will slow. Higher commodities prices and interest rates will be a headwind to the economy. Elevated commodity prices will increase input costs and may put pressure on margins. Higher rates and energy prices will also be a burden on consumers.

With the likely slowing global economy, we have to make some adjustments to our strategy. For equities, we have moved from positive to neutral as the war increases the investment risks in the short term (3 months). What has not changed is our view that Asia should outperform the developed markets. Asia is more distant from the conflict and should have less direct impact. The fund has no direct exposure to Russia.

With the recent correction in China markets, we now favour China as valuations are compelling. China is trading at multi-year low valuations. Although China will be impacted in the short term due to the lockdowns from their COVID19 policy, the authorities are already on a policy easing stance. Policies to promote growth including lower tax for SMEs, the postponement of property taxes and the relaxation of property purchase requirements. China is easing policy in contrast with the US that is tightening policy. Over the longer run (1 year), Asia looks attractive with valuation at levels that coincided with market lows. We maintain our favourable view on Asean, as there has been a smoother reopening of the economies as vaccination rates have hit sufficient thresholds. Selected Asean countries like Malaysia and Indonesia will also benefit from the higher commodity prices.

In March, the Maybank Asian Equity Fund returned -2.75% in SGD and -2.45% in USD. From a country perspective, Singapore and Indonesia contributed most to the return while China was the largest detractor. From a sector perspective, Financials and Industrials were the largest contributors while Consumer Discretionary and Real Estate were the largest detractors.
